ROUTES

The 25 mile loop goes through scenic parts of Palo Alto and its adjoining cities. This is an easy ride over flat terrain.

The moderate 100 kilometer (62 mile) route takes you through Silicon Valley -- the heart of the country's electronics industry -- to lunch at Stevens Creek Park. The loop includes rolling hills and short climbs.

The 100 mile route follows the 100 kilometer route, then climbs through the Redwoods to Skyline Blvd. where you will enjoy spectacular views of the Pacific Ocean and San Francisco Bay. The return loop includes the beautiful and historical roads of West San Mateo.

The 200 kilometer (124 mile) route will be a challenge to the serious bicyclist. The route closely follows the 100 mile route, then continues north over several strenuous ascents. The return loop is by way of picturesque Portola Valley.

Pick a route and ride the Sequoia Century.
